The relationship between radiographically determined osteoarthritis (OA) of the knee and symptoms and function of the patients was examined by means of gait analysis and Doppler ultrasound (US) of the knee. In 23 patients it was found that the distance walked on a level surface (SLS) and the symptomatic percentage (SP) of those patients (age 75 +/- 11 years) being unable to walk on a level surface at all, had a significant negative correlation with the alpha angle, the radiographic grading of the menisci
