I have a text file that contains a set of filenames, each filename ended with the text file itself. e.g. test.txt test1.txt test2.txt I would like to be able to convert the text to a valid filename (including a file extension). Converting to a valid filename is not a problem, however I'm getting stuck on how to convert carriage returns (\r) into the correct text to be included in the filename. I'm getting stuck on the following lines of code: filename = filename + (newline if (line.endswith(newline)) else "") + line.rstrip(newline) line.rstrip(newline) strips the ending the line, but also strips any carriage
